

MŪGA PAKKHA JĀTAKA - N°538 (*)

WAT TALING CHAN (Sukhothai)

* We recommend that you read the Notice at the end of this document before reading it in full.

[1] "Shew no intelligence" etc. This story the Master told at Jatavana concerning the great renunciation. One day the Brethren seated in the Hall of Truth were discussing the praises of the Blessed One's great renunciation. When the Master came and inquired of the Brethren what was the topic which they were discussing as they sat there, on hearing what it was, he said: "No, Brethren, this my renunciation of the world, after leaving my kingdom, was not wonderful, when I had fully exercised the perfections; for before, even when my wisdom was still immature, and while I was still attaining the perfections, I left my kingdom and renounced the world." And at their request he told them a story of the past.

Once upon a time a king Kāsirājā ruled justly in Benares. He had sixteen thousand wives, but not one among them conceived either son or daughter. The citizens assembled as in the Kusa Jātaka (N°531), saying: "Our king has no son to keep up his line". And they begged the king to pray for a son. The king commanded his sixteen thousand wives to pray for sons. But though they worshipped the moon and the other deities and prayed, they obtained none. Now his chief queen Candādevī, the daughter of the king of the Maddas, was devoted to good works, and he asked her also to pray for a son. So on the day of the full moon, she took upon herself the Uposatha vows, and while lying on a little bed, as she reflected on her virtuous life, she made an Act of Truth in these terms: "If I have never broken the commandments, by the truth of this my protestation [2] may a son be borne to me."

WAT KOHPRAYAJENG (Nonthaburi)

Through the power of her piety, Sakka's dwelling became hot. Sakka, having considered and ascertained the cause, said: "Candādevī asks for a son, I will give her one". So, as he looked for a suitable son, he saw the Bodhisatta. Now the Bodhisatta, after having reigned twenty years in Benares, had been reborn in the Ussada hell where he had suffered for eighty thousand years, and had then been born in the world of the thirty-three gods, and after having stayed there his allotted period, he had passed away therefrom and was desirous of going to the world of the higher gods. Sakka went up to him and said: "Friend, if you are born in the world of men you will fully exercise the perfections and the mass of mankind will be advantaged. Now this chief queen of Kāsirājā, Candā, is praying for a son, do you be born in her womb." He consented, and came attended by five hundred deities, and was himself conceived in her womb, while the other deities were conceived in the wombs of the wives of the king's ministers.

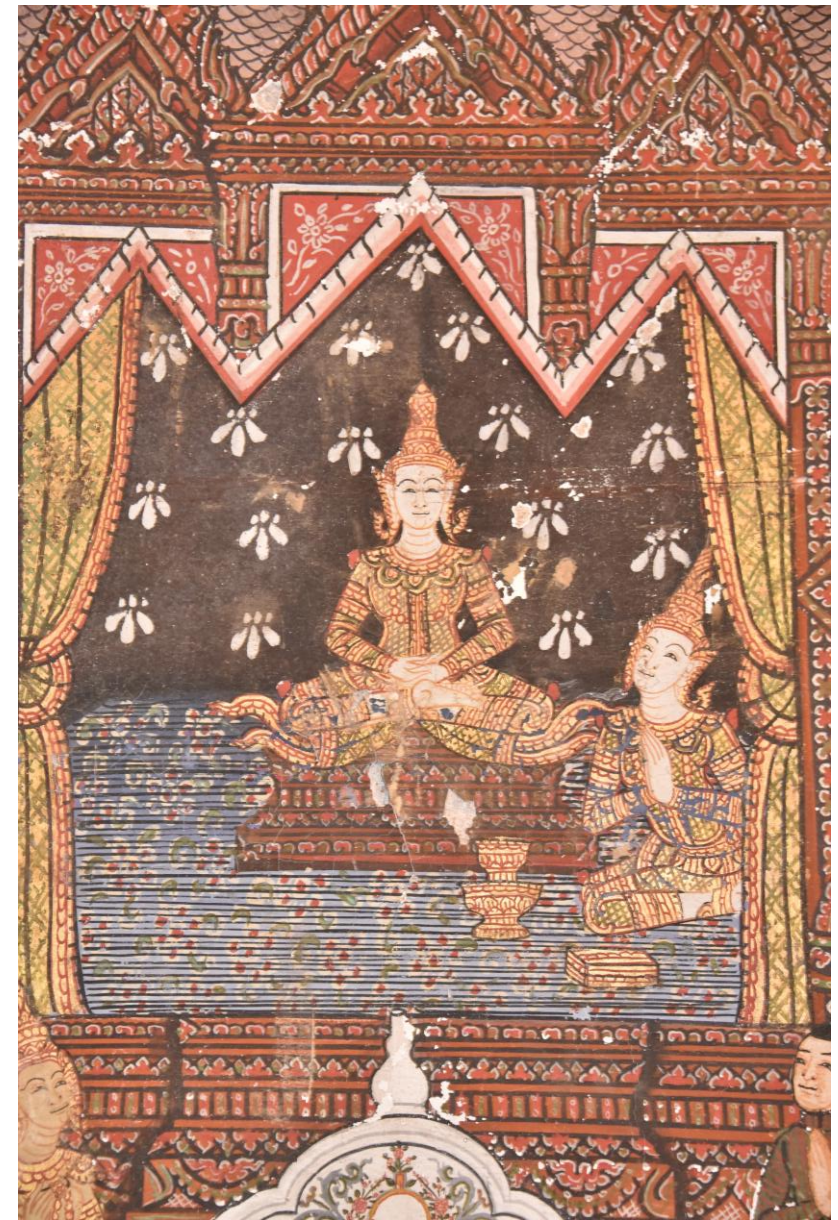

WAT SAI TAI (WARUNEE SHOP) (Nakhon Sawan)

The queen's womb seemed to be full of diamond. When she became aware of it, she told it to the king, who caused every care to be taken for the safety of the unborn child; and at last she brought forth a son endued with auspicious marks. On the same day five hundred young nobles were born in the ministers' houses. At that moment the king was seated on his royal dais, surrounded by his ministers, when it was announced: "A son is born to thee, O king." At hearing it, paternal affection arose, and piercing through his skin reached to the marrow in his bones. Joy sprang up within him and his heart became refreshed. He asked his ministers: "Are you glad at the birth of my son?" "What art thou saying, Sire?" they answered. "We were before helpless, now we have a help, we have obtained a lord." The king gave orders to his chief general: "A retinue must be prepared for my son, find out how many young nobles have been born today in the ministers' houses." He saw the five hundred and went and told it to the king.

WAT DAOWADUENGSAKAM (Bangkok)

The king sent princely dresses of honour for the five hundred young nobles, and he also sent five hundred nurses. He gave moreover sixty-four nurses for the Bodhisatta, all free from the faults of being too tall, &c., [3] with their breasts not hanging down, and full of sweet milk. If a child drinks milk, sitting on the hip of a nurse who is too tall, its neck will become too long ; if it sits on the hip of one too short, its shoulder-bone will be compressed; if the nurse be too thin, the babe's thighs will ache; if too stout, the babe will become bow-legged; the body of a very dark nurse is too cold, of one very white, is too hot; the children who drink the milk of a nurse with hanging breasts, have the ends of their noses flattened ; some nurses have their milk sour, others have it bitter, &c. Therefore, avoiding all these faults, he provided sixty-four nurses all possessed of sweet milk and without any of these faults; and after paying the Bodhisatta great honor, he also gave the queen a boon. She accepted it and kept it in her mind. On the day of naming the child they paid great honor to the brahmans who read the different marks, and inquired if there was any danger threatening. They, beholding the excellence of his marks, replied: "O king, the prince possesses every mark of future good fortune, he is able to rule not one continent only but all the four, there is no danger visible." The king, being pleased, when he fixed the boy's name, gave him the name Temiyakumāro, since it had rained all over the kingdom of Kāsī on the day of his birth and he had been born wet.

WAT CHANG PHUEAK (Lampang)

WAT HUAU NAKKHARAT (Kanchanaburi)

WAT KHONGKHALAM (Ratchaburi)

When he was one month old, they adorned him and brought him to the king, and the king having looked at his dear child, embraced him and placed him on his hip and sat playing with him. Now at that time four robbers were brought before him; one of them he sentenced to receive a thousand strokes from whips barbed with thorns, another to be imprisoned in chains, a third to be smitten with a spear, the fourth to be impaled. The Bodhisatta, on hearing his father's words, was terrified and thought to himself, "Ah! My father through his being a king is becoming guilty of a grievous action which brings men to hell." The next day they laid him on a sumptuous bed under a white umbrella, and he woke after a short sleep and opening his eyes beheld the white umbrella and the royal pomp, and his fear increased all the more; [4] and as he pondered. "From whence have I come into this palace?" By his recollection of his former births, he remembered that he had once come from the world of the gods and that after that he had suffered in hell, and that then he had been a king in that very city. While he pondered to himself, "I was a king for twenty years and then I suffered eighty thousand years in the Ussada hell, and now again I am born in this house of robbers, and my father, when four robbers were brought before him, uttered such a cruel speech as must lead to hell; if I become a king I shall be born again in hell and suffer great pain there, " he became greatly alarmed, his golden body became pale and faded like a lotus crushed by the hand, and he lay thinking how he could escape from that house of robbers.

WAT KOH WALUKARAM (Lampang)

Then a goddess who dwelt in the umbrella, and who in a certain previous birth had been his mother, comforted him; "Fear not, my child Temiya; if you really desire to escape, then pretend to be a cripple, although not really one; though not deaf, pretend to be deaf, and, though not dumb, pretend to be dumb, putting on these characteristics, show no signs of intelligence." So she uttered the first stanza:

"Show no intelligence, my child, be as a fool in all men's eyes, Content to be the scorn of all, thus shalt thou gain at last the prize. "

Being comforted by her words he uttered the second stanza,

"O goddess, I will do thy will, what thou commandest me is best, Mother, thou wishest for my weal, thou longest but to see me blest, "

and so he practiced these three characteristics. The king, in order that his son might lose his melancholy, had the five hundred young nobles brought near him. The children began crying for their milk, but the Bodhisatta, being afraid of hell, reflected that to die of thirst would be better than to reign, and did not cry. The nurses told this [5] to Queen Candā and she told it to the king. He sent for some Brahmans skilled in signs and omens and consulted them. They replied, "Sire, you must give the prince his milk after the proper time has passed, he will then cry and seize the breast eagerly and drink of his own accord." So they gave him his milk after letting the proper time pass by, and sometimes they let it pass by for once, and sometimes they did not give it to him all through the day. But he, stung by fear of hell, even though thirsty, would not cry for milk. Then the mother or the nurses gave him milk, though he did not cry for it, saying, "The boy is famished."

The other children cried when they did not get their milk, but he neither cried nor slept nor doubled up his hands nor feet, nor would he hear a sound. Then his nurses reflected: "The hands and feet of cripples are not like his, the formation of the jaws of the dumb is not like his, the structure of the ears of the deaf is not like his; there must be some reason for all this, let us examine into it." So they determined to try him with milk, and so for one whole day they gave him no milk; but though parched, he uttered no sound for milk. Then his mother said: "My boy is famished, give him milk"; and she made them give him milk. Thus giving him milk at intervals they spent a year in trying him, but they did not discover his weak point. Then saying: "The other children are fond of cakes and dainties; we will try him with them." They set the five hundred children near him and brought various dainties and placed them close by him, and, telling them to take what they liked, they hid themselves. The other children quarreled and struck one another and seized the cakes and ate them, but the Bodhisatta said to himself, "O Temiya, eat the cakes and dainties if you wish for hell"; and so in his fear of hell he would not look at them. Thus even though they tried him with cakes and dainties for a whole year they discovered not his weak point. Then they said, "Children are fond of different kinds of fruit"; and they brought all sorts of fruit and tried him; [6] the other children fought for them and ate them, but he would not look at them, and thus for a whole year they tried him with various kinds of fruit.

WAT NAT BAN YI KHAN (Bangkok)

Then they said, "Other children are fond of playthings"; so they set golden and other figures of elephants, &c., near him; the rest of the children seized them as if they were spoil, but the Bodhisatta would not look at them, and thus for a whole year they tried him with playthings. Then they said, "There is a special food for children four years old, we will try him with that"; so they brought all sorts of food; the other children broke them in pieces and ate them; but the Bodhisatta said to himself, "O Temiya, there is no counting of the past births when you did not obtain food." And for fear of hell he did not look at them; until at last his mother, with her heart well-nigh rent, fed him with her own hand.

WAT LAMUT (Nakhon Pathom)

WAT BANGKHIAN WICHIANCHAI (Ayutthaya)

Then they said, "Children five years old are afraid of the fire, we will try him with that". So, having had a large house made with many doors, and having covered it over with palm leaves, they set him in the middle surrounded by the other children and set fire to it. The others ran away shrieking, but the Bodhisatta said to himself that it was better than the torture in hell, and remained motionless as if perfectly apathetic, and when the fire came near him they took him away.

WAT WASANA WARARAM (Lopburi)

Then they said, "Children six years old are afraid of a wild elephant"; so they had a well-trained elephant taught, and, when they had seated the Bodhisatta with the other children in the palace-court, they let it loose. On it came trumpeting and striking the ground with its trunk and spreading terror. The other children fled in all directions in fear for their lives, but the Bodhisatta, being afraid of hell, sat where he was, and the well-trained animal took him and lifted him up and down, and went away without hurting him.

WAT PHUTTHAISAWAN (Ayutthaya)

WAT KHOT THIMTHARAM (Rayong)

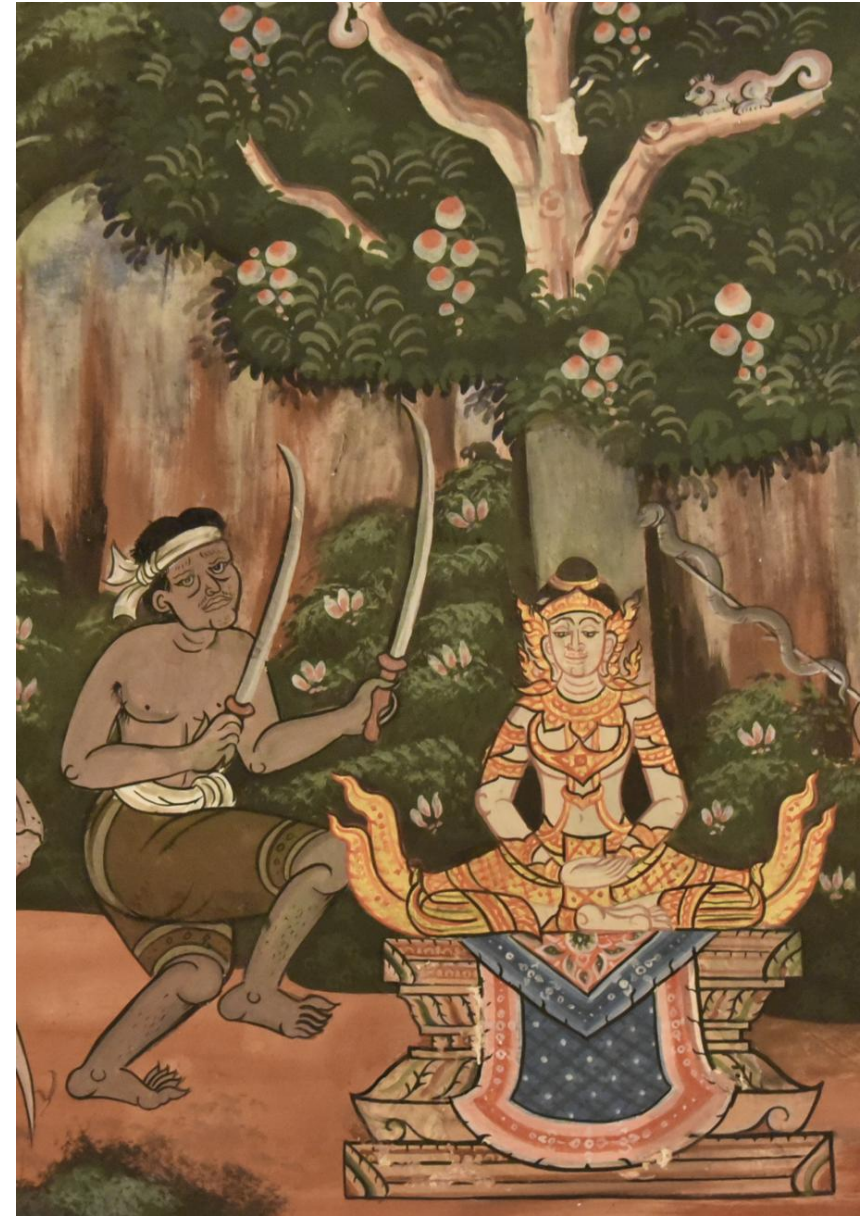

When he was seven years old, as he was sitting surrounded by his companions, they let loose some serpents with their teeth extracted and their mouths bound; the other children ran away shrieking, but the Bodhisatta, remembering the fear of hell, remained motionless, saying: "It is better to perish by the mouth of a fierce serpent"; then the serpents enveloped his whole body and they spread their hoods on his head, but still he remained motionless. Thus though they tried him again and again, they still could not discover his weak point.,

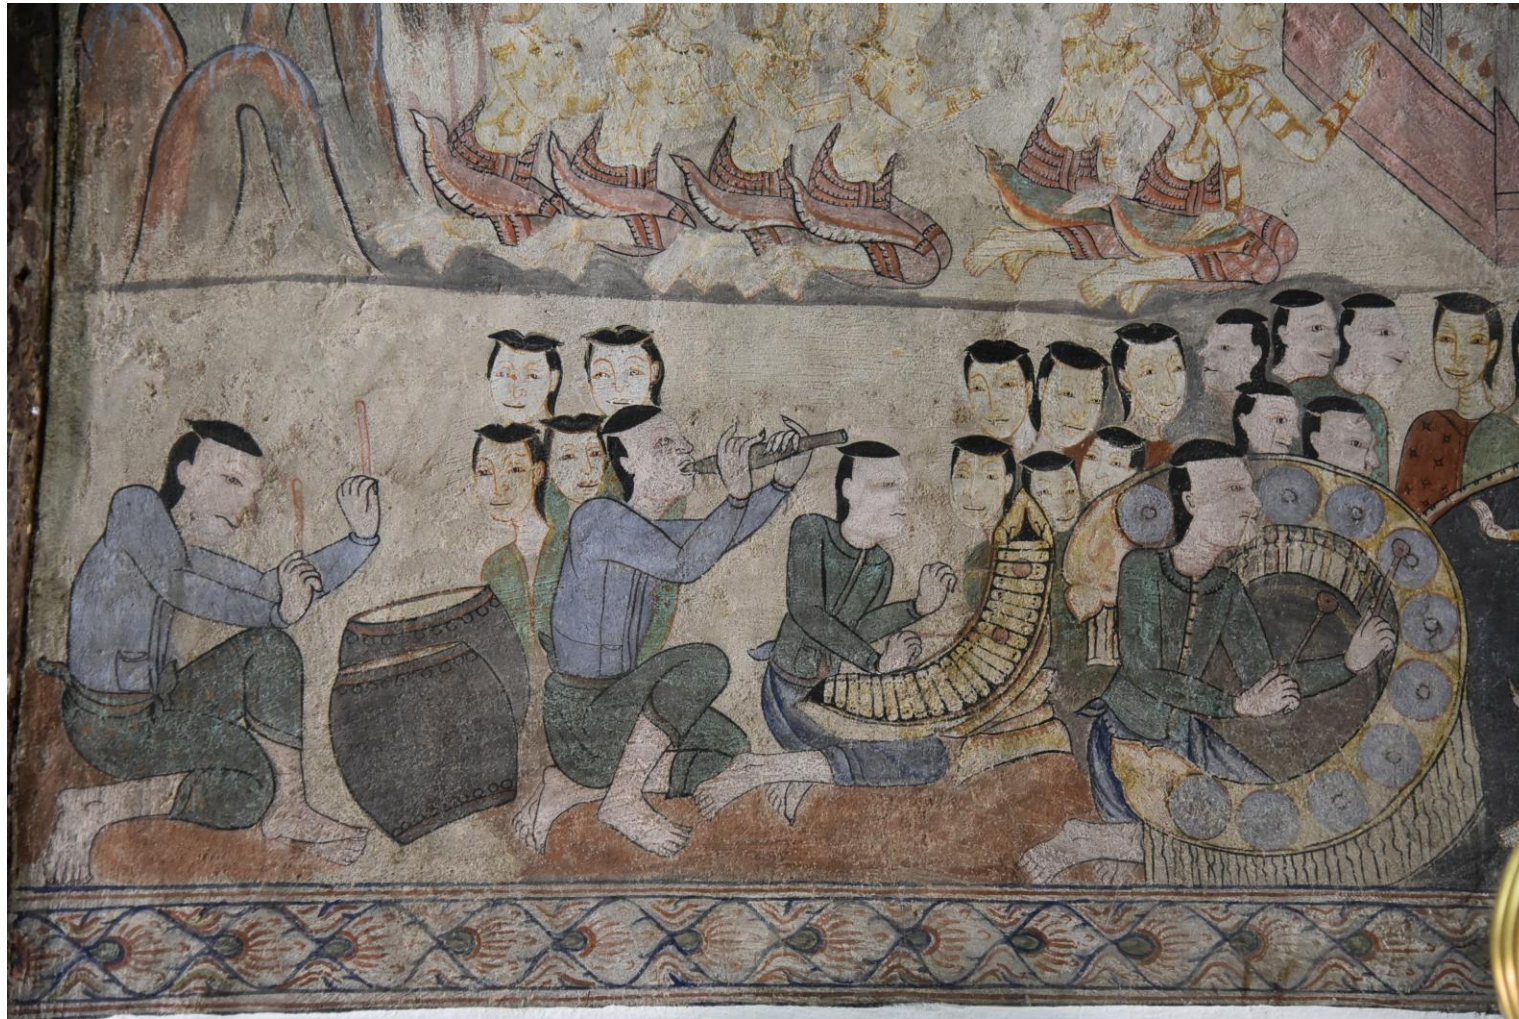

WAT AMPHAWAN CHETIYARAM (Samut Songkhram)

[7] Then they said: "Boys are fond of social gatherings"; so, having set him in the palace-court with the five hundred boys, they caused an assembly of mimes to be gathered together; the other boys, seeing the mimes, shouted 'bravo' and laughed loudly, but the Bodhisatta, saying to himself that if he were born in hell there would never be a moment's laughter or joy, remained motionless as he pondered on hell, and never looked at the dancing. Thus trying him again and again they discovered no weak point in him.

Thus they said: "We will try him with the sword"; so they placed him with the other boys in the palace-court, and while they were playing, a man rushed upon them, brandishing a sword like crystal and shouting and jumping, saying, "Where is this devil's child of the King of Kāsī? I will cut off his head." The others fled, shrieking in terror at the sight of him, but the Bodhisatta, having pondered on the fear of hell, sat as if unconscious. The man, although he rubbed the sword on his head and threatened to cut it off, could not frighten him and at last went away. Thus though they tried him again and again, they could not discover his weak point.

WAT KOK วัดกก (Bangkok)

WAT PHOTHARAM TEMPLE (Maha Sarakham )

When he was ten years old, in order to try whether he was really deaf, they hung a curtain round a bed and made holes in the four sides and placed conch-blowers underneath it without letting him see them. All at once they blew the conchs, there was one burst of sound; but the ministers, though they stood at the four sides and watched by the holes in the curtain, could not through a whole day detect in him any confusion of thought or any disturbance of hand or foot, or even a single start. So after a year had past, they tried him for another year with drums; but even thus, though they tried him again and again, they could not discover his weak point.

Then they said, "We will try him with a lamp"; so in the night-time in order to see whether he moved hand or foot in the darkness, they lighted some lamps in jars, and having extinguished all the other lamps, they put these down for a while in the darkness, and then suddenly lifting the lamps in the jars, created all at once a blaze, and watched his behavior; but though they thus tried him again and again for a whole year, they never saw him start even once.

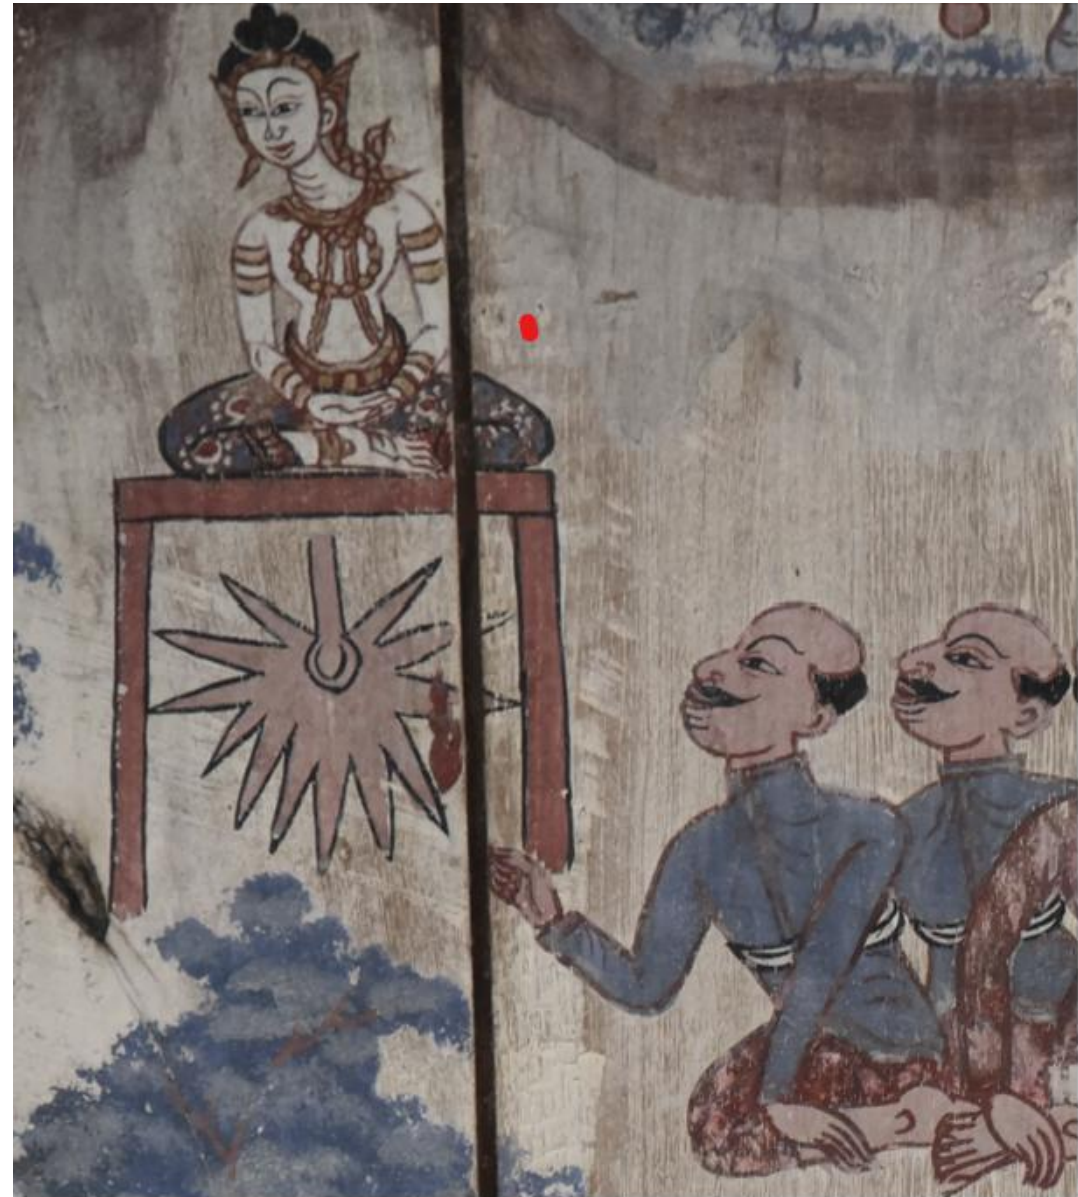

[8]Then they said, "We will try him with molasses"; so they smeared all his body with molasses and laid him in a place infested with flies and stirred the flies up; these covered his whole body and bit it as if they were piercing it with needles, but he remained motionless as if perfectly apathetic; thus they tried him for a year, but they discovered no weak point in him.

Then when he was fourteen years old, they said, "This youth now he is grown up loves what is clean and abhors what is unclean, we will try him with what is unclean"; so from that time they did not let him bathe or rinse his mouth or perform any bodily ablutions, until he was reduced to a miserable plight, and he looked like a released prisoner. As he lay, covered with flies, the people came round and reviled him, saying, "O Temiya, you are grown up now, who is to wait on you? Are you not ashamed? Why are you lying there? Rise up and cleanse yourself." But he, remembering the torments of the hell Gūtha, lay quietly in his squalor; and though they tried him again and again for a year, they discovered no weak point in him.

WAT KO LAN (Tak)

Then they put pans of fire in the bed under him, saying, "When he is distressed by the heat, he will perhaps be unable to bear the pain and will show some signs of writhing"; boils seemed to break out on his body, but the Bodhisatta resigned himself, saying, "The fire of the hell Avīci flames up a hundred leagues, this heat is a hundred, a thousand times preferable to that," so he remained motionless. Then his parents, with breaking hearts, made the men come back, and took him out of the fire, and implored him, saying, "O prince Temiya, we know that thou art not in any way crippled by birth, for cripples have not such feet, face, or ears as thou hast; we gained thee as our child after many prayers, do not now destroy us, but deliver us from the blame of all the kings of Jambudīpa"; but, though thus entreated by them, he lay still motionless, as if he heard them not. Then his parents went away weeping; [9] and sometimes his father or his mother came back alone, and implored him; and thus they tried him again and again for a whole year, but they discovered no weak point in him.

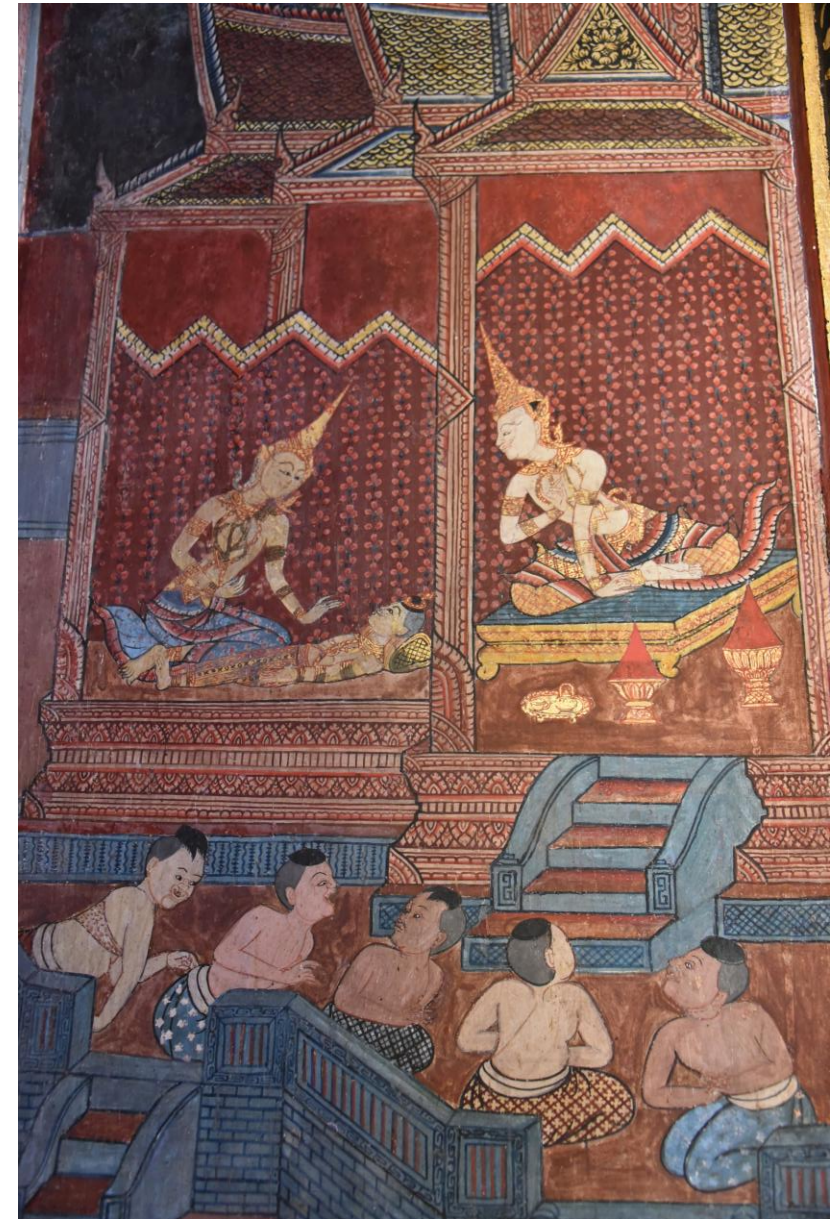

WAT KO LAN (Tak)

Then when he was sixteen years old they considered, "Whether it be a cripple or deaf and dumb, still there are none, who when they are grown up, do not delight in what is enjoyable and dislike what is disagreeable; this is all natural in the proper time like the opening of flowers. We will have dramas acted before him and will thus try him." So they summoned some women full of all graces, and as beautiful as the daughters of the gods, and they promised that whichever of them could make the prince laugh, or could entangle him in sinful thoughts should become his principal queen. Then they had the prince bathed in perfumed water and adorned like a son of the gods, and laid on a royal bed prepared in a suite of royal chambers like the dwellings of the gods, and having filled his inner chamber with a mingled fragrance of perfumed wreaths, wreaths of flowers, incense, unguents, spirituous liquor, and the like, they retired. Meanwhile the women surrounded him and tried hard to delight him with dancing and singing and all sorts of pleasant words; but he looked at them in his perfect wisdom and stopped his inhalations and exhalations in fear lest they should touch his body, so that his body became quite rigid. They, being unable to touch him, said to his parents, " His body is all rigid, he is not a man, but must be a goblin." Thus his parents, though they tried him again and again, discovered no weak point in him.

WAT BANG PHASI (Nakhon Pathom)

Thus, though they tried him for sixteen years with the sixteen great tests and many smaller ones, they were not able to detect a weak point in him. Then the king, being full of vexation, summoned the fortune-tellers and said: "When the prince was born ye said that he has fortunate and auspicious marks, he has no threatening obstacle; but he is born a cripple and deaf and dumb; your words do not answer to the facts." "Great king," they replied, "nothing is unseen by your teachers, but we knew how grieved you would be if we told you that the child of so many royal prayers [10] would be all ill-luck; so we did not utter it." "What must be done now?" "O king, if this prince remains in this house, three dangers are threatened, viz. to your life or your royal power, or the queen; therefore it will be best to have some unlucky horses yoked to an unlucky chariot, and, placing him therein, to convey him by the western gate and bury him in the charnel-ground." The king assented, being frightened at the threatened dangers.

WAT MATCHIMAWAT (Songkhla)

When the queen Candādevī heard the news she came to the king. "My lord, you gave me a boon and I have kept it unclaimed, give it to me now." "Take it, O queen." "Give the kingdom to my son." "I cannot, O queen; thy son is all ill-luck." "Then if you will not give it for his life, give it to him for seven years." "I cannot, O queen." "Then give it to him for six years, for five, four, three, two, one year. Give it to him for seven months, for six, five, four, three, two months, one month, for half a month." "I cannot, O queen." "Then give it to him for seven days." "Well," said the king, "take your boon." So she had her son adorned, and, the city being gaily decorated, a proclamation was made to the beat of a drum. "This is the reign of prince Temiya," and he was seated upon an elephant and led triumphantly right wise round the city, with a white umbrella held over his head. When he returned and was laid on his royal bed she implored him all the night. "My child, prince Temiya, on thy account for sixteen years I have wept and taken no sleep, and my eyes are parched up, and my heart is pierced with sorrow. I know that thou art not really a cripple or deaf and dumb, do not make me utterly destitute." In this manner she implored him day after day for five days.

WAT DAOWADUONGSARAM (Bangkok)

On the sixth day the king summoned the charioteer Sunanda and said to him, "Tomorrow morning early yoke some ill-omened horses to an ill-omened chariot and having set the prince in it take him out by the western gate and dig a hole with four sides in the charnel-ground; throw him into it, and break his head with the back of the spade and kill him, then scatter dust over him and make a heap of earth above, [11] and after bathing yourself come hither." That sixth night the queen implored the prince, "O my child, the King of Kāsī has given orders that you are to be buried tomorrow in the charnel-ground, tomorrow you will certainly die, my son." When the Bodhisatta heard this, he thought to himself, "O Temiya, your sixteen years' labor has reached its end," and he was glad; but his mother's heart was as it were cleft in twain. Still he would not speak to her lest his desire should not attain its end.

BAN YANG TEMPLE (Saraburi)

WAT BUAK KROK LUANG (Chiang Mai)

At the end of that night, in the early morning, Sunanda the charioteer yoked the chariot and made it stand at the gate, and entering the royal bedchamber he said, "O queen, be not angry, it is the king's command." So saying, as the queen lay embracing her son he pushed her away with the back of his hand, and lifted up the prince like a bundle of flowers and came down from the palace. The queen was left in the chamber smiting her breast and lamenting with a loud cry. Then the Bodhisatta looked at her and considered. "If I do not speak she will die of a broken heart," but though he desired to speak, he reflected, "If I speak, my efforts for sixteen years will be rendered fruitless; but if I do not speak, I shall be the saving of myself and my parents." Then the charioteer lifted him into the chariot and saying, "I will drive the chariot to the western gate," he drove it to the eastern gate, and the wheel struck against the threshold. The Bodhisatta, hearing the sound, said, "My desire has attained its end," and he became still more glad at heart.

WAT KONG LAD (Nakhon Pathom)

WAT PHUTTHAISAWAN (Ayutthaya)

When the chariot had gone out of the city, it went a space of three leagues by the power of the gods, and there the end of a forest appeared to the charioteer as if it were a charnel-ground; so thinking it to be a suitable place, he turned the chariot out of the road, and stopping it by the roadside he alighted and took off all the Bodhisatta's ornaments and made them into a bundle and laid them down, and then taking a spade began to dig a hole.

Then the Bodhisatta thought, "This is my time for effort; for sixteen years I have never moved hands nor feet, are they in my power or not?" So he rose and rubbed his right hand with his left, and his left hand with his right, [12] and his feet with both his hands, and resolved to alight from the chariot. When his foot came down, the earth rose up like a leather bag filled with air and touched the hinder end of the chariot; when he had alighted, and had walked backwards and forwards several times, he felt that he had strength to go a hundred leagues in this manner in one day. Then he reflected. "If the charioteer were to set against me, should I have the power to contend with him?" So he seized hold of the hinder end of the chariot and lifted it up as if it were a toy cart for children, and said to himself that he had power to contend with him; and as he perceived it, a desire arose to adorn himself.

WAT THA CHAD (Suphanburi)

At that moment Sakka's palace became hot. Sakka, having perceived the reason, said, "Prince Temiya's desire has attained its end, he desires to be adorned, what has he to do with human adornment?" and he commanded Vissakamma to take heavenly decorations and to go and adorn the son of the King of Kāsī. So he went and wrap the prince with ten thousand pieces of cloth and adorned him like Sakka with heavenly and human ornaments. The prince, decked with all the bravery of the King of the gods, went up to the hole as the charioteer was digging, and standing at the edge, uttered the third stanza:

WAT BANG PHASI (Nakhon Pathom)

*"Why in such haste. O charioteer? And wherefore do you dig that pit?
Answer my question truthfully, what do you want to do with it?"*

The charioteer went on digging the hole without looking up and spoke the fourth stanza;

*"Our king has found his only son crippled and dumb, an idiot quite;
And I am sent to dig this hole and bury him far out of sight."*

The Bodhisatta replied:

*"I am not deaf nor dumb, my friend, no cripple, not even lame am I;
If in this wood you bury me, you will incur great guilt thereby."*

*[13] Behold these arms and legs of mine, and hear my voice and what I say;
If in this wood you bury me, you will incur great guilt today."*

Then the charioteer said. "Who is this? It is only since I came here that he has become as he describes himself." So he left off digging the hole and looked up; and beholding his glorious beauty and not knowing whether he was a god or a man, he spoke this stanza:

"A heavenly minstrel or a god, or art thou Sakka, lord of all?"

Who art thou, pray; whose son art thou? What shall we name thee when we call?"

Then the Bodhisatta spoke, revealing himself and declaring the law:

*"No heavenly minstrel nor a god, nor Sakka, lord of all am I;
I am the King of Kāsī's son whom you would bury ruthlessly."*

I am the son of that same king under whose sway you serve and thrive.

You will incur great guilt today if here you bury me alive.

*If 'neath a tree I sit and rest while it its shade and shelter lends,
I would not break a single branch, only the sinner harms his friends.
The sheltering tree, it is the king; I am the branch that tree has spread;
And you the traveller, charioteer, who sits and rests beneath its shade;
If in this wood you bury me, great guilt will fall upon your head."*

WAT PAWANA PIRATARAM (Bangkok)

[14] But though the Bodhisatta said this, the man did not believe him. Then the Bodhisatta resolved to convince him, and he made the woods resound with his own voice and the applause of the gods, as he commenced these ten gāthās in honor of friends.

*"He who is faithful to his friends may wander far and wide,
Many will gladly wait on him, his food shall be supplied.
Whatever lands he wanders through, in city or in town,
He who is faithful to his friends finds honor and renown.
No robbers dare to injure him, no warriors him despise;
He who is faithful to his friends escapes all enemies.
Welcomed by all he home returns, no cares corrode his breast.
He who is faithful to his friends is of all kin the best.
He honors and is honored too, respect he takes and gives;
He who is faithful to his friends full meed from all receives.
He is by others honored who to them due honor pays,
He who is faithful to his friends wins himself fame and praise.
Like fire he blazes brightly forth, and sheds a light divine,
He who is faithful to his friends will with fresh splendor shine.
His oxen surely multiply, his seed unfailing grows,
He who is faithful to his friends reaps surely all he sows.
If from a mountain-top he falls or from a tree or grot,
He who is faithful to his friends finds a sure resting spot.
The banyan tree defies the wind, girt with its branches rooted round,
He who is faithful to his friends doth all the rage of foes confound."*

WAT NO PHUTTHANGKUL (Suphanburi)

[15] Even though he thus discoursed, Sunanda did not recognize him and asked who he was; but as he approached the chariot, even before he saw the chariot and the ornaments which the prince wore, he recognized him as he looked at him, and falling at his feet and folding his hands spoke this stanza:

"Come, I will take thee back, O prince, to thine own proper home; Sit on the throne and act the king, why in this forest roam?"

The Great Being replied:

"I do not want that throne or wealth; I want neither friends nor kin, Since it is by evil acts alone that I that throne could win."

The charioteer spoke:

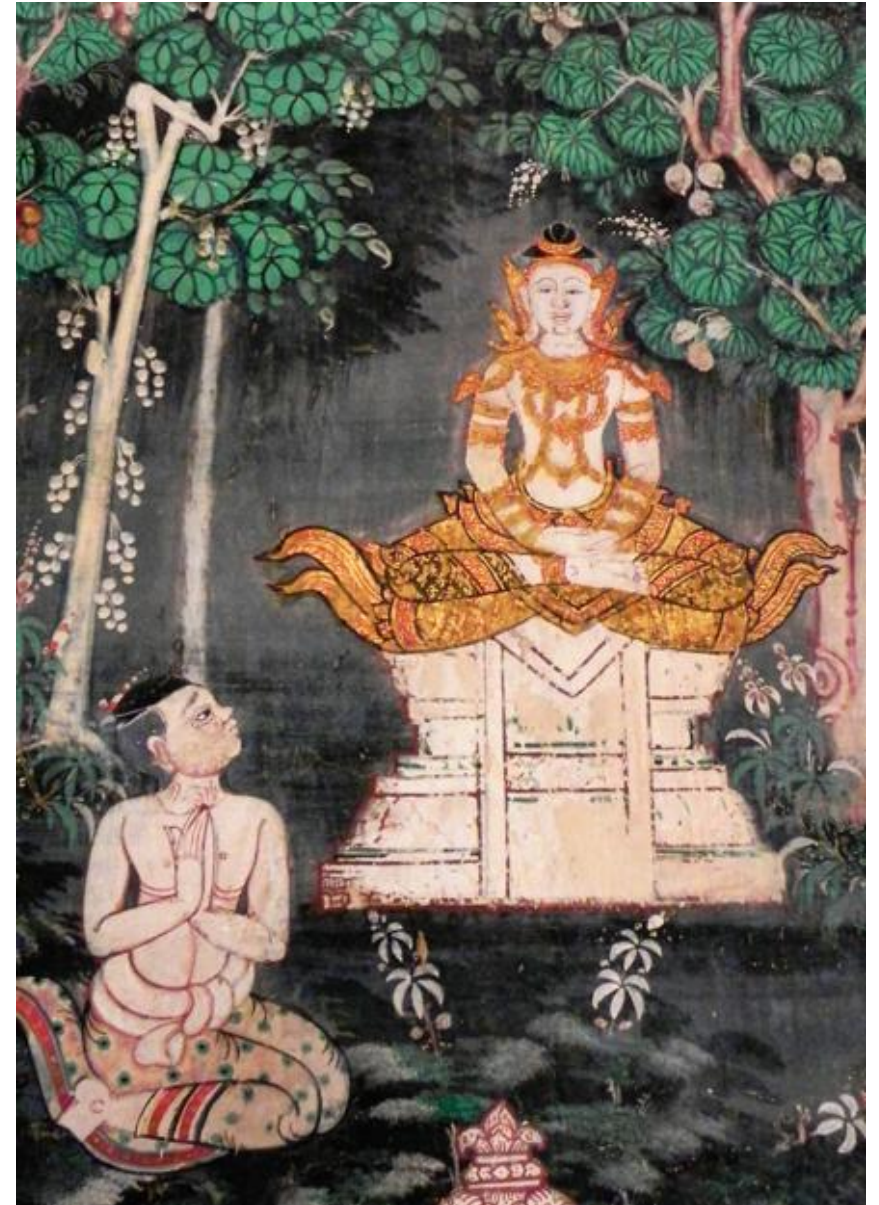

*"A brimful cup of welcome, prince, will be prepared for thee;
And thy two parents in their joy great gifts will give to me.
The royal wives, the princes all, Vesiya and Brahmans both,
Great presents in their full content will give me, nothing loth.
Those who ride elephants and cars, foot-soldiers, royal guards,
When thou return home again, will give me sure rewards.
The country folk and city folk will gather joyously,
And when they see their prince returned will presents give to me."*

[16] The Great Being spoke:

*"By parents I was left forlorn, by city and by town,
The princes left me to my fate. I have no home my own.
My mother gave me leave to go, my father me forsook,
Here in this forest-wild alone the ascetic's vow I took."*

As the Great Being called to mind his own virtues, delight arose in his mind and in his ecstasy he uttered a hymn of triumph:

*"Even to those who hurry not, the heart's longing wins success;
Know, charioteer, that I today have gained ripe holiness.
Even by those who hurry not, the highest end is won;
Crowned with ripe holiness I go, perfect and fearing none."*

WAT KHONGKHARAM (Ratchaburi)

The charioteer replied:

*"Thy words, my lord, are pleasant words; open thy speech and clear;
Why wast thou dumb, when thou didst see father and mother near?"*

The Great Being spoke:

*"No cripple I for lack of joints, nor deaf for lack of ears,
I am not dumb for want of tongue as plainly now appears.
In an old birth I played the king, as I remember well,
But when I fell from that estate I found myself in hell.
Some twenty years of luxury I passed upon that throne,
But eighty thousand years in hell did for that guilt atone.
[17] My former taste of royalty filled all my heart with fear;
Thence was I dumb, although I saw father and mother near.
My father took me on his lap, but midst his fondling play,
I heard the stern commands he gave, 'At once this miscreant slay,
Saw him in sunder, go, that wretch impale without delay.'
Hearing such threats well might I try crippled and dumb to be,
And wallow helplessly in filth, an idiot willingly.
Knowing that life is short at best and filled with miseries,
Who' gains another for its sake would let his anger rise?
Who on another for its sake would let his vengeance light,
Through want of power to grasp the truth and blindness to the right?"*

[18] Then Sunanda reflected, "This prince, abandoning all his royal pomp as if it were carrion, has entered into the wood, unwavering in his resolve to become an ascetic, what have I to do with this miserable life? I too will become an ascetic with him "; so he spoke this stanza:

*"I too would choose the ascetic's life with thee;
Call me, O prince, for I as thou would be"*

When thus requested, the Great Being reflected, " If I at once admit him to the ascetic life, my father and mother will not come here and thus they will suffer loss, and the horses and chariot and ornaments will perish, and blame will accrue to me, for men will say. 'He is a goblin, has he devoured the charioteer?' " So wishing to save himself from blame and to provide for his parents' welfare, he entrusted the horses and chariot and ornaments to him and spoke this stanza:

*"Restore the chariot first, thou are not a free man now;
First pay thy debts, they say, then take the ascetic's vow."*

The charioteer thought to himself, "If I went to the city and he meanwhile departed elsewhere his father and mother on hearing my news of him would come back with me to see him; and if they found him not they would punish me; so I will tell him the circumstances in which I find myself and will get his promise to remain here". So he spoke two stanzas:

*"Since I have done thy bidding, prince, I pray,
Do thou be pleased to do what I shall say.
Stay till I fetch the king, stay here of grace,
He will be joyful when he sees thy face."*

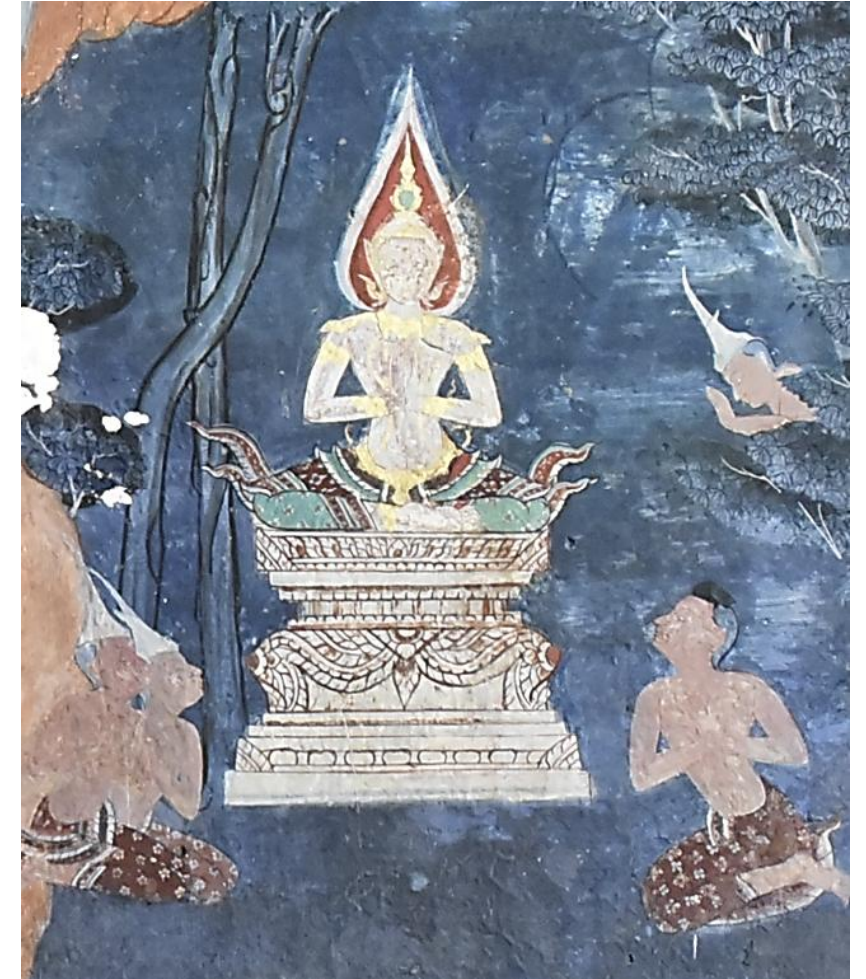

[19] The Great Being replied:

*"Well, be it as thou sayest, charioteer;
I too would gladly see my father here.
Go and salute my kindred all, and take
A special message for my parents' sake."*

The man took the commands:

*He clasped his feet and, all due honors paid,
Started to journey as his Master bade.*

At that moment Candādevī opened her lattice and, as she wondered whether there were any tidings of her son and looked on the road by which the charioteer would return, she saw him coming alone and burst into lamentation.

WAT CHANG YAI (Ayuttha)

The Master has thus described it:

*" Seeing the empty car and lonely charioteer,
The mother's eyes were filled with tears, her breast with fear:
'The charioteer comes back, my son is slain;
Yonder he lies, earth mixed with earth again.
Our bitterest foes may well rejoice, alack!
Seeing his murderer come safely back,
Dumb, crippled, say, could he not give one cry,
As on the ground he struggled helplessly?
Could not his hands and feet force thee away,
Though dumb and maimed, while on the ground he lay?' "*

[20] The charioteer spoke:

*"Promise me pardon, lady, for my word,
And I will tell thee all I saw and heard."*

The queen answered:

*"Pardon I promise you for every word;
Tell me in full whatever you saw or heard."*

Then the charioteer spoke:

*"No cripple he, he is not deaf, his utterance clear and free;
He played fictitious parts at home, through dread of royalty.
In an old birth he played the king as he remembers well,
But when he fell from that estate he found himself in hell.
Some twenty years of luxury he passed upon that throne,
But eighty thousand years in hell did for that guilt atone.
His former taste of royalty filled all his heart with fear;
Hence was he dumb although he saw father and mother near.
Perfectly sound in all his limbs, faultlessly tall and broad,
His utterance clear, his wits undimmed, he treads salvation's road.
If you desire to see your son, then come at once with me,
You shall behold prince Temiya, perfectly calm and free."*

[21] But when the prince had sent the charioteer away, he desired to take the ascetic vow. Knowing his desire, Sakka sent Vissakamma, saying, "Prince Temiya wishes to take the ascetic vow, go and make a hut of leaves for him and the requisite articles for an ascetic." He hastened accordingly, and in a grove of trees three leagues in extent he built a hermitage furnished with an apartment for the night and another for the day, a tank, a pit, and fruit-trees, and he prepared all the requisites for an ascetic and then returned to his own place.

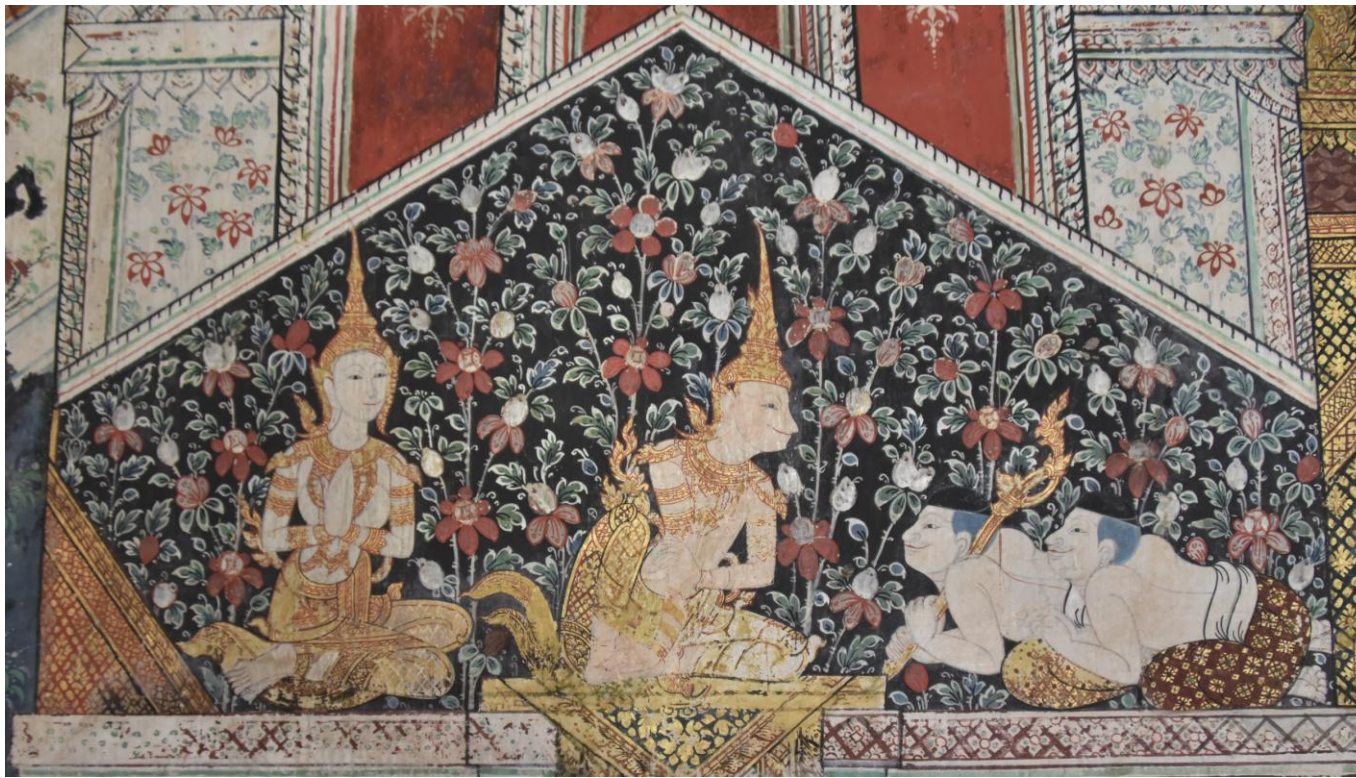

WAT PAWANA PIRATARAM (Bangkok)

When the Bodhisatta saw it, he knew that it was Sakka's gift; so he entered into the hut and took off his clothes and put on the red bark garments, both the upper and under, and threw the black antelope-skin on one shoulder, and tied up his matted hair, and, having taken a carrying pole on his shoulder and a walking staff in his hand, he went out of the hut. Then he walked repeatedly up and down, displaying the full dress of an ascetic, and having shouted triumphantly "O the bliss, O the bliss," returned to the hut; and sitting down on the ragged mat he entered upon the five transcended faculties. Then going out at evening and gathering some leaves from a kāra tree nearby, he soaked them in a vessel supplied by Sakka in water without salt or buttermilk or spice, and ate them as if they were ambrosia, and then, as he pondered on the four perfect states, he resolved to take up his abode there.

WAT KOHPRAYAJENG (Nonthaburi)

WAT KHONGKHALAM (Ratchaburi)

Meanwhile the King of Kāśī, having heard Sunanda's words, summoned his chief general and ordered him to make preparation for the journey, saying:

*"The horses to the chariots yoke, bind girths on elephants and come;
Sound conch and tabor far and wide, and wake the loud-voiced kettledrum.
Let the hoarse tomtom fill the air, let rattling drums raise echoes sweet,
Bid all this city follow me, I go my son once more to greet.
Let palace-ladies, every prince, Vesiya and Brahmans everyone.
All have their chariot-horses yoked. I go to welcome back my son.
Let elephant-riders, royal guards, horsemen and footmen everyone,
Let all alike prepare to go, I go to welcome back my son.
Let country folk and city folk gather in crowds in every street,
Let all alike prepare to go, I go once more my son to greet."*

[22] The charioteers thus ordered yoked the horses, and having brought the chariots to the palace-gates informed the king.

The Master has thus described it:

*" Sindh horses of the noblest breed stood harnessed at the palace gates;
The charioteers the tidings bring, 'The train, my lord, thy presence waits.' "*

The king spoke:

*" 'Leave all the clumsy horses out, no weaklings in our cavalcade,' (They told the charioteer, 'Be sure not to bring horses of that kind,')
Such were the royal orders given, and such the charioteers obeyed. "*

The king, when he went to his son, assembled the four castes, the eighteen guilds, and his whole army, and three days were spent in the assembling of the host. On the fourth day, having taken all that was to be taken in the procession, he proceeded to the hermitage and there was greeted by his son and gave him the due greeting in return.

WAT ARUN (Bangkok)

The Master has thus described it:

*" His royal chariot then prepared, the king without delay
Got in, and cried out to his wives 'Come with me all away!'
With yakstail fan and turban crest, and royal white sunshade,
He mounted in the royal car, with finest gold arrayed.
Then did the king set forth at once, his charioteer beside,
And quickly came where Temiya all tranquil did abide.
[23] When Temiya beheld him come all brilliant and ablaze,
Surrounded by attendant bands of warriors, thus he says:
'Father, I hope it is well with thee, thou hast good news to tell,
I hope that all the royal queens, my mothers, too, are well?'
'Yes, it is well with me, my son, I have good news to tell,
And all the royal queens indeed, thy mothers, all are well.'*

WAT BANG MAFO (Nakhon Sawan)

*'I hope thou drinkest no strong drink, all spirit dost eschew,
 To righteous deeds and almsgiving thy mind is ever true?'
 'Oh yes, strong drink I never touch, all spirit I eschew.
 To righteous deeds and almsgiving my mind is ever true.'
 'The horses and the elephants I hope are well and strong,
 No painful bodily disease, no weakness, nothing wrong?'
 'Oh yes, the elephants are well, the horses well and strong,
 No painful bodily disease, no weakness, nothing wrong.'
 'The frontiers, as the central part, all populous, at peace
 The treasures and the treasuries quite full say what of these?
 Now welcome to thee, royal Sir, O welcome now to thee!
 Let them set out a couch, that here seated the king may be.' "*

WAT SUAN LUANG (Nakhon Si Thammarat)

The king, out of respect for the Great Being, would not sit upon the couch.
 [24] The Great Being said, "If he does not sit on his royal seat, let a couch of leaves be spread for him," so he spoke a stanza:
*"Be seated on this bed of leaves spread for thee as is meet,
 They will take water from this spot and duly wash thy feet. "*

The king in his respect would not accept even the seat of leaves but sat on the ground. Then the Bodhisatta entered the hut of leaves, and, taking out a kâra leaf, and inviting the king, he spoke a stanza:

*"No salt have I, this leaf alone is what I live upon, king;
Thou art come here a guest of mine, be pleased to accept the fare I bring. "*

The king replied:

"No leaves for me, that's not my fare; give me a bowl of pure hill rice, Cooked with a subtil flavouring of meat to make the pottage nice."

WAT KOK วัดกก (Bangkok)

At that moment the queen Candādevī, surrounded by the royal ladies, came up, and after clasping her dear son's feet and saluting him, sat on one side with her eyes full of tears. The king said to her, "Lady, see what thy son's food is," and put some of the leaves into her hand and also gave a little to the other ladies, who took it, saying, "O my lord, dost thou indeed eat such food? Thou endure great hardship," and sat down. Then the king said, "O my son, this appears wonderful to me," and he spoke a stanza:

"Most strange indeed it seems to me that thou thus loft alone Livest on such mean food and yet thy color is not gone. "

[25] The prince thus replied:

*"Upon this bed of leaves strewn here I lie indeed alone,
A pleasant bed it is and so my color is not gone;
Girt with their swords no cruel guards stand sternly looking on,
A pleasant bed it is and so my color is not gone;
Over the past I do not mourn nor for the future weep,
I meet the present as it comes, and so my color keep.*

*Mourning about the hopeless past or some uncertain future need,
This dries a young man's vigor up as when you cut a fresh green reed."*

The king thought to himself, "I will inaugurate him as king and carry him away with me"; so he spoke these stanzas inviting him to share the kingdom:

*"My elephants, my chariots, horsemen, and infantry,
And all my pleasant palaces, dear son, I give to thee.
My queen's apartments too I give, with all their pomp and pride,
Thou shalt be sole king over us, there shall be none beside.
Fair women skilled in dance and song and trained for every mood
Shall lap thy soul in ease and joy, why linger in this wood?
The daughters of thy foes shall come proud but to wait on thee;
When they have borne three sons, then go an anchorite to be.
Come, my first-born and my heir, in the first glory of thine age,
Enjoy thy kingdom to the full, what dost thou in this hermitage?"*

WAT WASANA WARARAM (Lopburi)

The Bodhisatta spoke :

*"No, let the young man leave the world and fly its vanities,
The ascetic's life best suits the young, thus counsel all the wise.
[26] No, let the young man leave the world, a hermit and alone;
I will embrace the hermit's life; I need neither pomp nor throne.
I watch the boy, with childish lips; he 'father,' 'mother,' cries,
Himself begets a son, and then he too grows old and dies.
So the young daughter in her flower grows blithe and fair to see,
But she soon fades cut down by death like the green bamboo tree.
Men, women all, however young, soon perish, who in sooth
Would put his trust in mortal life, cheated by fancied youth?
As night by night gives place to dawn life still contracts its span;
Like fish in water which dries up, what means the youth of man?
This world of ours is smitten sore, is ever watched by one,
They pass and pass with purpose fell, why talk of crown or throne?
'Who sorely smites this world of ours I who watches grimly by?
And who thus pass with purpose fell? Tell me the mystery.'
'Tis death who smites this world, old age who watches at our gate,
And 'tis the nights which pass and win their purpose soon or late.
As when the lady at her loom sits weaving all the day,
Her task grows ever less and less, so waste our lives away.
As speeds the hurrying river's course, on with no backward flow,
So in its course the life of men doth ever forward go;
And as the river sweeps away trees from its banks uptorn,
So are we men by age and death in headlong ruin borne."*

WAT BUAK KROK LUANG (Chiang Mai)

[27] The king, as he listened to the Great Being's discourse, became disgusted at a life spent in a house, and longed to leave the world; and he exclaimed, "I will not go back to the city, I will become an ascetic here; if my son will go to the city I will give him the white umbrella." So to try him he once more invited him to take his kingdom:

*"My elephants, my chariots, horsemen, and infantry,
And all my pleasant palaces, dear son, I give to thee.
My queen's apartments too I give, with all their pomp and pride.
Thou shalt be sole king over us, there shall be none beside.
Fair women skilled in dance and song and trained for every mood
Shall lap thy soul in ease and joy, why linger in this wood?
The daughters of thy foes shall come proud but to wait on thee;
When they have borne three sons, then go an anchoret to be.
My treasures and my treasures, footmen and cavalry,
And all my pleasant palaces, dear son, I give to thee.
With troops of slaves to wait on thee, and queens to be embraced,
Enjoy thy throne, all health to thee, why linger in this waste?"*

But the Great Being replied by shewing how little he wanted a kingdom.

*"Why seek for wealth, it will not last; why woo a wife, she soon will die;
Why think of youth, 'twill soon be past; and threatening age stands ever nigh.
What are the joys that life can bring? Beauty, sport, wealth, or royal fare?*

*What is a wife or child to me? I am set free from every snare.
This thing I know, where'er I go. Fate watching never slumbereth;
Of what avail is wealth or joy to one who feels the grasp of death?
[28] Do what thou hast to do today, who can ensure the morrow's sun?
Death is the Master-general who gives his guarantee to none.
Thieves ever watch to steal our wealth; I am set free from every chain;
Go back and take thy crown away; what want I with a king's domain?"*

WAT CHONLATHI PHUESARAM (Chumphon)

The Great Being's discourse with its application came to an end, and when they heard it not only the king and the queen Candā but the sixteen thousand royal wives all desired to embrace the ascetic life. The king ordered a proclamation to be made in the city by beat of drum, that all who wished to become ascetics with his son should do so; [29] he caused the doors of his treasuries to be thrown open, and he had an inscription written on a golden plate, and fixed on a great bamboo as a pillar, that his treasure-jars would be exposed in certain places and that all who pleased might take of them. The citizens also left their houses with the doors open as if it were an open market, and flocked round the king. The king and the multitude took the ascetic vow together before the Great Being. A hermitage erected by Sakka extended for three leagues. The Great Being went through the huts made of branches and leaves, and he appointed those in the centre for the women as they were naturally timid, while those on the outside were for the men. All of them on the fast-day stood on the ground, and gathered and ate the fruits of the trees which Vissakamma had created, and followed the rules of the ascetic life. The Great Being, knowing the mind of everyone, whether he indulged thoughts of lust or malevolence or cruelty, sat down in the air and taught the Law to each, and as they listened they speedily developed the Faculties and the Attainments.

A neighboring king, hearing that Kāsirājā had become an ascetic, resolved to establish his rule in Benares, so he entered the city, and seeing it all adorned he went up into the palace, and, beholding the seven kinds of precious stones there, he thought to himself that some kind of danger must gather round all this wealth; so he sent for some drunken revellers and asked them by which gate the king had gone out. They told him "by the eastern gate"; so he went out himself by that gate and proceeded along the bank of the river. The Great Being knew of his coming and having gone to meet him, sat in the air and taught the law. Then the invader took the ascetic vow with all his company; and the same thing happened also to another king. In this way three kingdoms were abandoned; the elephants and horses were left to roam wild in the woods, the chariots dropped to pieces in the woods, and the money in the treasuries, being counted as mere sand, was scattered about in the hermitage. All the residents there attained to the eight Ecstatic Meditations; and at the end of their lives became destined for the world of Brahma. Yea the very animals, as the elephants and horses, having their minds calmed by the sight of the sages, were eventually reborn in the six heavens of the gods.

The Master, having brought his lesson to an end, said, "Not now only but formerly also did I leave a kingdom and become an ascetic." Then he identified the Birth: "the goddess in the umbrella was Uppalavaṇṇā, [30] the charioteer was Sāriputta, the father and mother were the royal family, the court was the Buddha's congregation, and the wise Mūgapakkha was myself."

After they had come to the island of Ceylon, Elder Khuddakatissa, a native of Maṅgaṇa, Elder Mahāvamsaka, Elder Phussadeva, who dwelt at Kaṭakandhakāra, Elder Mahārakkhita, a native of Uparimaṇḍakamāla, Elder Mahātissa, a native of Bhaggari, Elder Mahāsiva, a native of Vāmattapabbhāra, Elder Mahāmaliyadeva, a native of Kāḷavela, all these elders are called the late comers in the assembly of the Kuddālaka birth the Mūgapakkha birth the Ayoghara birth, and the Hatthipāla births Moreover Elder Mahānāga, a native of Maddha, and Elder Maliyamakādeva, remarked on the day of parinibbāna, "Sir, the assembly of the Mūgapakkha birth is today extinct." "Wherefore?" "I was then passionately addicted to spirituous drink, and when I could not bring those with me who used to drink liquor with me I was the last of all to give up the world and become an ascetic."

NOTICE

* Notice :

During our last seven trips to Thailand, we discovered the incomparably rich mural paintings in Buddhist temples. Totally lost in the face of this superabundance of scenes and characters, we tried to understand what was being represented to us. Apart from a few evocations of city and country life, it soon became clear that the illustrations were either about the life of the historical Buddha, or about a set of narratives with pictorial characteristics found from one temple to another, and which turned out to be the last ten JATAKA (N°538 to 547), the last reincarnations of the Buddha. Reading Professor E.B. COWELL's immense (in every sense of the word) work was a revelation. Despite the fact that the text is reproduced in the illustrated document, we warmly recommend reading the original document, which is available on the excellent website: (<https://archive.org/details/jatakaorstorieso06cowe/mode/1up>).

Indeed, this document contains numerous footnotes which have not been included in our document.

Reading the text on its own, while very appealing in terms of content, can be tedious in some parts. That's why we thought it would be a good idea to include illustrations alongside the text, to illustrate the point and “lighten” the writing a little. These illustrations come exclusively from our 4K photo and video archives, taken from some 750 temples visited, 160 of which featured JATAKA paintings of varying degrees of development. The representation of these JATAKA is doubly inhomogeneous. From one JATAKA to another, their evocation is very uneven, with Vessantara N°547 being by far the most represented. On the other hand, within a given JATAKA, the most spectacular and popular scenes are often the only moments evoked in the story, to the detriment of those more esoteric yet decisive to the understanding of the subject. That's why, for certain parts of the text, we've included images that are not strictly related to the written content, but are simply illustrative evocations of the narrative. Conversely, as far as possible, we have tried to stick as closely as possible to the story told in the text.

The choice of illustrations is totally arbitrary in terms of both their artistic and historical qualities. We have tried to balance the choice between older and more recent paintings, both to pay homage to younger and older artists, and to avoid neglecting temples in remote provinces that are essential to the lives of the inhabitants of these regions. We hope to be of service to a few potential readers, and wish them happy reading.
